

TEMPLE TOPICS JULY AND AUGUST 2018

Rabbi Jaech's Blog

My Cousin, the Bishop

It's not every rabbi that gets to have a bishop for a cousin. I'm lucky that way. My father's cousin, Rick Jaech, is the Evangelical Lutheran Bishop of Southwestern Washington State.

Like me, Bishop Jaech does a lot of interfaith and social justice work. One of my favorite photos of him was taken in Olympia, the capital of Washington State. In the photo Bishop Jaech stands with a rabbinic colleague and a representative of the Muslim Association of Puget Sound. The three of them were part of an interfaith effort to advocate on behalf of refugees and immigrants. I've also seen photos of Bishop Jaech visiting Israel, and the site of a sacred Longhouse used by the several Columbia River American Indian tribes.

Last summer, Bishop Jaech and I talked about creating an interfaith program. We thought people might be interested in hearing two cousins, a rabbi and a bishop, talk about their respective spiritual journeys. This summer, we will speak together at a Lutheran church in Tacoma, Washington.

When I first became a rabbi, I spoke regularly about my path to Judaism. Many Temple Israel members have heard me describe how I rejected the religion of my upbringing, lived for many years without any formal faith, and then discovered my spiritual home among the Jewish people and in the religion they created. My journey seems like a long-distance one. I started in one faith community and am now firmly rooted in another.

My cousin Bishop Jaech remained a Christian but he also took a journey. Had he remained in the Missouri Synod Lutheran Church in which the two of us were raised, he may have been expelled for his current interfaith work. (In fact, a Missouri Synod Lutheran Church minister lost his job in 2001 for participating in an interfaith service at Yankee Stadium after 9/11.) Like me, Bishop Jaech left the church of his childhood and joined a denomination more in keeping with his spiritual values and expression.

Our parents choose our early religious experiences. Ultimately, if we are wise, we each make our own choices about what feeds our souls and give our lives meaning. This spiritual search is essential to living a fully human life. Leo Baeck wrote: "Only an existence that is not content with the mere fact of existence can have any value."

Some of our spiritual choices are mindful ones. We may carefully consider options and choose what feels right to us. Other choices are less deliberate. As a young person I never would have predicted that I would follow my heart and discover the treasure that is our Jewish heritage.

The slower hours of summer can bring us the opportunity to reflect on our own paths. Yes, we may continue to feel assaulted by the news of the day and consumed by the worries of our lives. Yet we can make the choice to retreat from the whirlwind now and then. We can listen to the birds as their songs greets the sunrise. We can pause to hear the waves of an ocean or the trickle of a stream. We can look at the child who is holding our hand. And during these moments, we can ask ourselves: How far have I journeyed from the religious experiences of my childhood? Is my soul receiving the nourishment that it needs? "If not now, when?" (Pirkei Avot, 1:14).

I wish you each a meaningful journey this summer.

the 2017/18 season is over. As you plan for next year, please consider joining TINW congregation members and their families and Cherie Marcus and Amy Hersh for our SHARE-A-SHABBAT celebration at a group home for 8 developmentally disabled adults. Together we will participate in a short service led by the Cherie and Amy that includes music and stories along with the Shabbat dinner. We are taught, as members of the Jewish people, to respect individual differences. The experience of SHARE-A-SHABBAT will give further meaning to this important experience

WHERE: The group home is located on 36 McCarthy Dr., Ossining, (914) 923-1354 (9A to Stormytown Road, turn right on McCarthy).

The group home will provide the Shabbat dinner. Volunteers are asked to provide challah and dessert.

We also ask that volunteers spread out and sit amongst residents during the meal. If you are uncomfortable, just ask the residents about themselves- where they work, their family, vacations they go on, movies and sports teams they like, etc.

TINW Brotherhood

If you have questions, suggestions and/or if you have an idea that you'd like to promote, please feel free to contact any Brotherhood Board member listed below at brotherhood@tinw.org

It might surprise some spouses, significant others, children, parents or anyone who knows or thinks they know men to see the joy of cooking in action before a Brotherhood breakfast or BBQ or anything else involving food. It isn't the food, the desire to have slightly more than needed or the number of bagels; it is the camaraderie displayed by brother to brother. If we are going to serve the temple and our community, we might as well try to have fun. For the most part, when the Brothers get together there are smiles and some laughs, much respect and even more willingness to be part of a cause.

Significant events to connect with the men of the Temple included the Brotherhood service built around the creation of the State of Israel, our hard-working, fun-loving and optimistic softball team and our upcoming BBQ this coming July.

In some ways Brotherhood is like a big extended family. We share life's joys, ease life's burdens and make sure everyone eats well. We are an ever-evolving group looking to improve what we do in small ways and in large, what we do at home and at Temple and for causes far away from home. Next year we hope to continue to improve, continue to serve

As always check the temple website for Brotherhood events and the calendar.
